1 ST. ANDREWS CHURCH has an unusual Saxon stair turret dating from 750 to 800 A.D. An earlier church was burned down during the 9th Century Danish invasions. To the right of the path leading to the church is the Lyvedon family vault and inside the church is the tomb of Lord Lyvedon.

2 In 1400 Edward IV granted Brigstock a market which was held on the Hall Hill. The MARKET CROSS is ancient and bears the initials and dates of the Queens of England commencing with E.R. 1580 (Elizabeth I).

3 The Congregational Church now named the UNITED REFORMED CHURCH was built in 1799 and has a copy of the Breches Bible.

4 The WATER MILL is recorded in the Domesday Book and was in use until 1910. The house is now a private dwelling but the wheel is still intact.

5 The village primary school is called LATHAM'S CHARITY SCHOOL because it was founded by Rev. Nicholas Latham of Barrowell. The old school stood on Hall Hill where the War Memorial now stands.

6 The WOODLAND PYTCHLEY KENNELS were established by a division of the famous Pytchley Hunt in 1874. Lord Londale was once Master of the Foxhounds.

7 The long narrow building in Old Dry Lane (Old Grove Road) was opened in 1874 by Wallis and Linnell as a clothing factory. It closed in the 1970s and is now used as offices.

8 The MANOR HOUSE was built in 1150 as a Royal Hunting Lodge. Various Kings came hunting in the Royal Parks of Geddington and Farming Woods. King John stayed here several times and held court in February 1207. The Montague family ancestors of the present Duke of Buccleuch came connected with the manor in 1300. It was considerably added to in about 1550.

9 The METHODIST CHAPEL, along Park Walk was built in 1843 and was used by the Salvation Army before becoming the Women's Institute.

Parish Council

Your parish council is a local authority that makes some decisions on behalf of the people in the parish. It is the level of government closest to the community with North Northamptonshire Council above it in the hierarchy.

The parish council is often the first place people will go with concerns or ideas and for this reason it is a vital part of the community.

Some Village History

Brigstock has been the largest village within Rockingham Forest since medieval times and the population, exceeding nine hundred since 1500, has remained relatively constant since that time. Rockingham Forest was a royal hunting forest designated by William the Conqueror around the time of the Domesday survey. The forest was split into three administrative areas (known as bailiwicks) and Brigstock was the administrative centre for the bailiwick of "Bricstoc".

Forest officers held manorial courts at Brigstock Manor House until they were abolished in 1817. 18th century maps show that most of Brigstock parish was covered by ridge and furrow with a few hedged fields immediately around the village. The present style of the village, with its closed plots containing gardens and small barns or outbuildings with a variety of uses interspersed amongst its dwellings, was established at the time of enclosure which occurred comparatively late to the rest of England. The style was reinforced when villagers received portions of land close to the village in compensation for commons rights lost during enclosure. It is only recently that the working farms within the bounds of the village have been lost.

Historic Features The parish church of Brigstock, St Andrews, is Saxon in origin. The church contains a semi-circular stair turret and nave dating from the late tenth century. Brigstock's Saxon tower is one of only three in the country. The church also comprises a Norman north aisle, a 13th century Lady Chapel, a tower raised in the 14th century and a later spire.

Brigstock Manor House dates in part from the mid-12th century. It is believed to have been used by King John as a hunting lodge at the turn of the 13th century and was later occupied by the Montagu family.

The village market cross, situated in Hall Hill, has been dated from 1586 and the weekly market was held here until 1623.

Wallis' factory at the junction of Back Lane and Old Dry Lane was a clothing factory from 1872 to 1979.

The kennels of the Woodland Pytchley Hunt have been situated on Kennel Hill since 1873. Although the dogs have moved they still meet on Hall Hill on Boxing Day.

The Coronation Oak, planted to mark the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, stands at the junction of Grafton Road and Sudborough Road.
